

ADMISSIONS PROFILE

Fall 2010 Entering Class

The University of Cincinnati College of Law, now in its 178th year, is proud to offer an intimate and distinctive legal education. The College consistently draws students from far and wide geographically and in terms of their educational, work, and life experiences. This profile highlights the Fall 2010 entering class whose collective diversity has continued to enhance our heterogeneous student body.

While our students are talented academically in measurable terms of grades and test scores, their strength also lies in other non-quantitative factors. For example, members of this class speak several languages: Arabic, French, German, Persian, Russian, Spanish, Japanese, Latin, Portuguese, Armenian and Chinese. The class also includes former members of the US armed forces, AmeriCorps, former pastors, student government presidents, fraternity and sorority presidents, photographers, writers and athletes. As the wide variety of majors shown on the reverse of this sheet displays, there is indeed not a specific undergraduate major or path that one must follow to enter law school. Rather in law school admission more emphasis is given to the quality of instruction and the level of achievement attained.
