COURSE DESCRIPTION:

This seminar examines contemporary issues that are prevalent in the regulation of business organizations and activities. At the beginning of the semester, each student will select a research topic from a menu of choices provided by the course instructor. The students will then meet with the course instructor to discuss research plans and schedule the time for an in-class presentation of the topic. Each student is required to submit a presentation outline before his or her presentation, and a final paper on the chosen topic at the end of the semester.
