COURSE DESCRIPTION:

This course examines how the Ohio Supreme Court deals with its own precedent, develops and changes the law, interprets the state constitution, deals with political questions, and makes public policy. The areas of law studied in this context may include state constitutional law, employer liability for employee torts, tort reform, premises liability, employment-at-will, statutes of limitations, school vouchers, child witnesses and hearsay rules, executive privilege, and privity. A paper on one of these subject areas is required, and will fill the writing requirement for a seminar course.
