TRADITION & HISTORY

THE COLLEGE OF LAW

With the Hooding of the Class of 2011, the College of Law celebrates the 178th anniversary of its founding.

In 1833, when it was customary to learn the law by “reading” as an apprentice in a law office, Timothy Walker, Edward King, and Judge John Wright of the Ohio Supreme Court established the Cincinnati Law School. Walker, the inspiration behind the founding, had attended Harvard and was persuaded that students could develop their potential better in a law school than through an apprenticeship. The first course of instruction at the Cincinnati Law School consisted of lectures and practice in Moot Courts. It was offered by three faculty members to seventeen students who completed the course in six months. For the next 30 years, the law degree was conferred after one six-month term of study. Gradually this requirement was lengthened until in 1896, under the leadership of Dean Jacob Cox, the term of study was fixed at the present three years.

Dean Cox also served as president of the University of Cincinnati from 1885 to 1889. During his tenure, he proposed the consolidation of all the educational institutions in the city. The idea was opposed by the Cincinnati College, with which the Cincinnati Law School had by that time affiliated. The ensuing litigation between the university and the Cincinnati College hindered merger negotiations between the two schools. Accordingly, in 1896 the university established its own law department and named William Howard Taft, then a federal circuit judge, as dean. The competition between the two law schools led to a contract for a 10-year merger in 1897.

Taft remained as dean of the merged program until 1900, when he was appointed governor of the Philippines. It was left to his successor, the noted contracts authority Gustavus Henry Wald, to represent the Cincinnati Law School in the formation of the Association of American Law Schools. This organization, of which the school was a charter member, established standards of legal education appropriate to the future responsibilities of members of the bar serving society.

When the merger agreement expired, the Cincinnati College severed its connection with the university until 1918, when the law school of the Cincinnati College (Cincinnati Law School) and the law department of the University of Cincinnati were finally merged.

In the years since the college was established, the faculty have kept it on the frontiers of legal inquiry and education through influential scholarship and innovative teaching.

The deans who have led the college have stayed true to the vision of its three founders. It remains a place of opportunity, where students sharpen their minds and prepare themselves to better the lives of others.

UNIVERSITY OF CINCINNATI

The University of Cincinnati traces its origins to 1819, when the Cincinnati College and the Medical College of Ohio were founded. In 1879, the city of Cincinnati, acting under a state act “to enable cities of the first class to aid and promote education,” established the University of Cincinnati, which later absorbed these two colleges. For many years the country’s second oldest and second largest municipal university, the University of Cincinnati became the first municipally sponsored, state-affiliated university in 1968 and achieved full state university status in 1977. Located on five campuses, the university consists of 14 component colleges and divisions that provide a comprehensive range of undergraduate, graduate, and professional programs, and that exemplify the learning, research, and public service that bring the university national and international renown.

ACADEMIC ATTIRE

Academic attire dates back at least to the 14th century. Its origin is attributed to ecclesiastical influence, to the need for warmth in unheated rooms used by medieval scholars, and to the desire to avoid “excess in apparel” by wearing a long gown. Ultimately there developed distinctive caps, gowns, and hoods denoting the institution that granted the degree, the field of learning in which the degree was earned, and the level of the degree — bachelor, master, or doctor.

Bachelor’s gowns are closed at the throat and have long, pointed sleeves; master’s gowns are open in the front and have long sleeves, square and closed at the end, the arms coming through slits at the elbow. Doctor’s gowns, worn by the College of Law graduates today, are faced with velvet and have full, round sleeves. Each sleeve carries three bars of velvet called chevrons. Trustees, presidents, and marshals of a college or university may wear caps and gowns that are specially designed and colored. The hood adds color and meaning to the academic costume. The color of the lining identifies the university that granted the highest degree held by the wearer. The color of the trim signifies the field of learning in which the degree was received. The color of the legal profession is purple.

JOHN W. PECK AWARD

Each year the trial practice faculty select a student to receive the John W. Peck Award. Established in 1979 by the Cincinnati Chapter of the Federal Bar Association, the award honors the late Judge John W. Peck of the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals and is given to the law student demonstrating the highest quality of performance in a trial practice course. This award is announced at the Hooding Ceremony.

STANLEY M. CHESLEY AND HON. SUSAN J. DLOTT PRIZE

Through the generosity of Stanley M. Chesley, a member of the University of Cincinnati Board of Trustees and an alumnus of the UC College of Law, and the Hon. Susan J. Dlott, this annual award is given to the law student who achieves the highest grades in the litigation curriculum. This award is announced at the Hooding Ceremony.

CORBIN PRIZE

The Eugene M. Corbin Fund was established in 1984 by the friends and family of the late Professor Corbin, a tax and trial lawyer and a member of the law school faculty until his death in 1983. This award is conferred upon a graduating senior who has completed courses in the areas of trial practice and taxation and who demonstrates character, tenacity, and decency in managing personal and school responsibilities. This award is announced at the Hooding Ceremony.

NICHOLAS LONGWORTH, III ALUMNI ACHIEVEMENT AWARD

In 1988, the Hooding Committee initiated the Nicholas Longworth, III Alumni Achievement Award to annually recognize a graduate of the College of Law for outstanding contributions in a wide range of endeavors. These endeavors may include private law practice, internal corporate legal counsel, education or scholarly works, public or community service, or business or industry achievement. The award is named in honor of Nicholas Longworth, III, a distinguished graduate of the College of Law, who served as representative to the U.S. Congress from the First District of Ohio for 26 years and was speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives from 1925 until 1931, the year of his death.

Terry Coonan, Class of 1995

ROSENTHAL INSTITUTE FOR JUSTICE/OHIO INNOCENCE PROJECT FELLOWS

The Rosenthal Institute for Justice sponsors and coordinates student involvement in public interest activities and public policy development. The Institute offers fellowships for law students interested in working on public policy research projects such as capital punishment, search and seizure, and discrimination in housing. At the conclusion of their research, fellows report their findings in a formal paper, which may result in publication as a law review article or in a book. On occasion, fellows have testified concerning their findings before legislative bodies, resulting in positive changes in the law. The Institute also presents panels and lectures on issues of public concern and has developed a number of clinical and classroom courses for students interested in public service, criminal law, and public interest law.

STUDENT ORGANIZATIONS

ADVOCATES FOR CHILDREN

Advocates for Children seeks to promote child advocacy in the legal community through service projects for at-risk children and career-building activities for students interested in juvenile law practice, including child welfare law, family law, and juvenile justice. Our workshops and discussion panels connect students to summer jobs, intern/extern programs for course credit, and funding for juvenile law positions both before and after graduation. Our service projects expose law students to the real-life challenges of children facing poverty, racial discrimination, and underfunded education, as well as building relationships between UC Law and the local community. Whether a student chooses to practice in juvenile law or another field, Advocates for Children is for everyone who cares about children.

FEDERALIST SOCIETY THE NORTON P. CHIPMAN CHAPTER

The Federalist Society for Law and Public Policy Studies is a group of conservatives and libertarians interested in the current state of the legal order. It is founded on the principles that the state exists to preserve freedom, that the separation of governmental powers is central to our Constitution, and that it is emphatically the province and duty of the judiciary to say what the law is, not what it should be. The society seeks both to promote an awareness of these principles and to further their application through its activities.

IMMIGRANT COMMUNITY LEGAL ADVOCACY PROJECT

The Immigrant Community Legal Advocacy Project (ICLAP) at Su Casa is a student organization that provides advocacy and outreach services to the Latino immigrant community of Greater Cincinnati. Student members work hand in hand with local attorneys to provide monthly legal educational programs and assistance to the growing Latino community. Past educational programs have addressed labor, housing, taxes, public benefits, the criminal system, and domestic violence issues. ICLAP's mission is to empower the Latino immigrant community by providing them with tangible and easily understood information about their rights and obligations.
